SCPP employs a holistic approach to foster an improved competitiveness of the Indonesian cocoa sector through 5 main components:

Good farming practices and technology transfer system

The process of knowledge and new technology is implemented through FFS which delivers Good Agricultural Practice (GAP) to farmers, established demo-plots, nursery, as well as trainings on rehabilitation techniques and cocoa rejuvenation.

Nutrition and gender sensitivity integration

Good Nutritional Practices (GNP) module promotes the establishment of home vegetable garden, supporting a balanced diet and nutrient rich food for the cocoa farmer households. The Program also promotes women active participation in the entire component.

Farmer organization, market access and certification

Farmer organization encourages farmer empowerment, efficient dissemination of training modules, and allows farmers to gain added value in the supply chain through certification and traceability of cocoa beans.

Integrated agribusiness financing

Access to commercial financing enhanced through utilizing market approach and focusing on farmer capacity building, cooperative strengthening, and savings promotion.

Stakeholder management and networking Platform

SCPP consistently involves government agencies, private sectors, Cocoa Sustainability Partnership (CSP) and Partnership for Indonesian Sustainable Agriculture (PISAgro), and international organizations.
